

Celebrating International MEN's Day – LONG LIVE THE INCLUSIVE LEADER!

The heroic leader, who was managing his team alone, up on his white horse is dead. Long live the inclusive leader!

The business world is becoming increasingly complex. Only by enhancing the full competencies of your team can you be successful in the future.

With this event on International Men's Day, Advance is kicking-off a series of events designed for male audiences. Let's discover together why being an inclusive leader makes business and other sense!

Being an inclusive manager may require a changed mind-set. It includes valuing individuality and creating an atmosphere of trust that allows team members to perform at their max. Some say, this is the only skill that will be demanded from managers in the future. In this interactive event, we will understand how being inclusive can lead to better results. We will hear about best practices from inclusive leaders and discuss what concrete actions men and women can take to cultivate partnerships across genders in the workplace and beyond.

Speakers

Roderick Munsters has 30 years of experience in the global asset management industry. He has been CEO of Edmond de Rothschild Asset Management, CEO of Robeco Group and CIO and executive board member of the two largest pension funds in Europe, ABP and PGGM. Currently, he is active as non-executive director and board advisor.

Christian Gansch is a Grammy Award winner and highly regarded internationally as a conductor, producer and consultant. He was leader of the Munich Philharmonic Orchestra and has worked with several other famous international orchestras. He conducted Beethoven's 9 symphonies with the Orchestra Teatro La Fenice in Venice and gave his Proms debut at London's Royal Albert Hall. Orchestras with their high potential for human conflicts, leadership issues and complex integrated communications are a perfect example of how to bring a huge variety of specialists and instruments together to form one integrated harmonious unit.

Allyson Zimmermann is a recognized authority on workplace issues including women on boards, the gender pay gap and women in leadership. Since 2007, Allyson has been instrumental in building Catalyst's presence and Supporter base in Europe. Working with leading global organizations, she helps Catalyst Supporters create more inclusive workplaces so all talent can advance.

David Affentranger has spent the maturity of his career in the communication area, gaining experience as a Journalist, PR-Consultant and Head of Media Relations for the Swiss TV. While communication is his primary job function by day, David also enjoys spending time with his family. He is a self-described food snob and likes everything that is crazy, wild and free.

We look forward to seeing you!
Empowering regards,

Alkistis Petropaki
